
Boughton's

Named after the family who owned the manor from 1471 and threw infamous parties, fought family feuds and committed at least one siblicide, which, naturally, means we have a ghost roaming the Manor.

Boughton's is also home to unquestionably the greatest of Victorian inventions, the Afternoon Tea, where a myriad of elegant, dainty delights present themselves as a treat for the eyes, before becoming a party for your taste buds.

And ours is no exception. A curated tour de force of sweet and savoury nibbles that will leave you gasping with pleasure at the sheer decadence of the way you're living your life.

And the added genius around the afternoon tea? It fits perfectly in that space between lunch and dinner.
